602 N. Pearl

Attachment A – Historical Significance

602 N. Pearl Ave. meets two of the ten criteria to be eligible for Local Landmark status, criteria three and four, as discussed below.

Criteria 3: Its identification with a person or persons who significantly contributed to the development of the community, county, state, or country.

Robert D. McIntosh & Mrs. McIntosh*: Robert D. McIntosh and family were the first residents at 602 N. Pearl Ave., having been responsible for the home's construction. Although the exact year the house was built it not presently known, it was built between 1906-1909. It is not on the 1906 Sanborn map, but Dr. and Mrs. McIntosh are listed as residing at this address in the 1909 Joplin City Directory (please see attached supporting documentation). Thus, the earliest evidence of the house itself at this time is circa 1909. It is located in Joplin's North Heights neighborhood.

Admittedly, Dr. and Mrs. McIntosh do not appear to have been as prominent as those who later resided at this address. However, they were indeed contributing members of our community: Dr. McIntosh through his dental practice and involvement with the Joplin Free Public Library Board of Directors and Mrs. McIntosh with her involvement serving on the board of the Young Women's Christian Association (please see supporting documentation). It's common practice in historic preservation that buildings or homes be named for their original owner. As such, if finalized, this residence will be known as the McIntosh House.

Warren B. Shackelford*: Warren B. Shackelford and family resided at 602 N. Pearl Ave. from 1918-1921. Mr. Shackelford was a prominent mine operator in Joplin and surrounding areas. He was the general manager for Admiralty Zinc Company and Tri-State Zinc and Lead, both companies being the largest producers of lead and zinc in the Midwest. Unlike many other operators of his day, Mr. Shackelford cared deeply about the safety of his employees. As such, he introduced and implemented the Leyner Water Drill, one of which is on display at the Joplin Museum Complex, thus eliminating the dangers of miner's consumption, dust, and other harmful environmental elements in Joplin mines.

He further improved conditions for miners by co-founding and presiding over the Southwest Missouri Mine Safety and Sanitation Association. Also, he helped co-found the Oklahoma, Kansas, and Missouri Safety and Sanitation Association, which became the Tri-State branch of the American Zinc Institute. Finally, he was one of the leading members of the National Zinc Institute and was "one of the best known and most highly respected of the mining operation" (Joplin Globe, Sunday, July 3, 1921). In 1921, Mr. Shackelford traveled to Chicago for an operation and, in the following weeks, died as a result of that operation.

Ralph L. & Lillian Kassab*: Ralph L. Kassab and family lived at 602 N. Pearl Ave. from 1933-1954. Mr. Kassab was born in Damascus, Syria and came to the United States in 1903, when he was 20 years old. In 1907, he opened a retail business on Joplin's Main Street. After moving through several Main St. locations, Kassab's opened at its most familiar location—506 Main St.—in 1961, where it remained until its closure in 1998. During it's time, Kassab's was a highly successful, elegant establishment that specialized in women's fashion.

Due to his success, Mr. Kassab came to be known as a pioneer merchant and one of Joplin's finest business and civic leaders. He was involved with several area charities and organizations, as highlighted in his obituaries (please see attached supporting documentation). The Joplin chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution award Mr. Kassab with the Americanization Medal, which is given to an adult naturalized citizen who demonstrates "trustworthiness, service, leadership, and patriotism" in the community. He also received special recognition from the Joplin Board of Realtors for "his faith in the future of Joplin" (Joplin News Herald, February 22, 1965. Pg. 1).

Fortunately for Joplin, Mr. Kassab's wife, Lillian, and their three children, Leon, Martha, and Anthony, were, like Mr. Kassab, very active members of our community who greatly contributed to the development of Joplin business, culture, and the quality of life. In a March 2003 Joplin Industries article, Diane Humphreys wrote, "The store may be gone, but the poise, the grace, and the caring of community that the Kassab family incorporates into their daily lives flourishes. We as a community feel blessed to have them as our friends, our neighbors, and our business associates."

Criteria 4: Its embodiment of distinguishing characteristics of an architectural style valuable for the study of a period, type, method of construction, or use of indigenous materials.

The house located at 602 N. Pearl Ave., Joplin, Missouri reflects the Prairie School of architecture, which may incorporate the Craftsman style. Together, this may be referred to as the Transitional Period. Specifically, this house embodies the American Foursquare house type of this period.

A reaction to the embellishments and ornateness of the Victorian era, the American Foursquare (a.k.a. the Prairie Box) is known for function, plainness, and simplicity. Characteristics of the American Foursquare include a large, box-shaped structure, usually 2 ½ stories, with the top few feet of the basement walls extending above ground. Other characteristics include a pyramidal, hipped roof, a large central dormer, and a covered front porch that spans the full-width of the house. Often, the entry is offset, though the façade is otherwise symmetrical. An early American Foursquare may have extensions or bays. Ultimately, the basic structure of the form of the house is what qualifies it as an American Foursquare.

Interior characteristics of the American Foursquare include simple, handcrafted woodwork and, at times, built-in storage. The layout is efficient, with four rooms on each floor: an entry/foyer, living room, dining room, and kitchen on the first floor and three bedrooms and a bathroom on the second floor. The third, or half-floor, was typically left open.

The American Foursquare was popular from about 1895-1930. Usually built in urban environments with materials on hand, the American Foursquare may be made of wood, brick, stucco, or other materials. The American Foursquare is important to the history of American domestic architecture, as it is among one of the first uniquely American schools of architecture.

PROMINENT MINE OPERATOR DIES IN CHICAGO HOSPITAL

Warren B. Shackleford Succumbs After Two Years' Illness—Connected With Big Companies in District.

Warren B. Shackelford, general manager of the Admiralty Zinc Company and a prominent resident of the Tri-State zinc and lead field for the last thirty years, died in Chicago yesterday morning, after going there for an operation about three weeks ago.

It was at first reported that an operation performed had been highly successful, but it was said yesterday that an investigation, in fact has merely served to disclose the hopelessness of any successful results from any surgery and that none had been attempted. Cancer of the liver is understood to have been the cause of death. He had been in ill health about two years.

In District Thirty Years.

Mr. Shackleford came to the Tri-State field about thirty years ago, coming here from St. Joseph. For a time he engaged in mining for himself and in 1907 became associated with the S. Y. Ramage Mining Company and acted as general manager for that firm for about eight years. Most of the operations of the Ramage Company were in the sheet-ground fields of Webb City, though in the latter part of the period a mine in the West Joplin camp was opened up and successfully operated for some time.

It was as manager for this concern that Mr. Shackleford first introduced water Leyner drills in this district, an improvement that did much toward eliminating the danger from miner's consumption that had become an increasing menace with the development of the sheet-ground zinc mines of the field.

Always taking an active interest in the welfare of his employes, Mr. Shackleford was one of the originators and one of the first presidents of the Southwest Missouri Mine Safety and Sanitation Association, which had its headquarters at Webb City. Later he also helped found the Oklahoma-Kansas-Missouri Safety and Sanitation Association, which ultimately became the Tri-State branch of the American Zinc Institute, with headquarters in Picher, Okla. He was also one of the leading members of the National Zinc Institute and maintained a keen interest in the development of the zinc industry even after his fatal illness prevented him from active participation in the different organizations working to that end.

tlcipation in the different organizations working to that end.

Manager of Three Companies.

In 1915 Mr. Shackleford resigned as manager for the company to become general manager of the Admiralty Zinc Company's properties, which had been purchased by the Cosden, Curtis and Aiken interests of Tulsa, Okla. This managership he retained at the time of his death, and also was general manager for the Sinden Zinc Company and for the Queen Esther Mining Company. The Admiralty Company has been one of the largest producers of zinc and lead in the field, having four concentrating plants, two of which have been down and two operating during recent months.

It is not known who will be Mr. Shackleford's successor as manager of these properties. Since his severe illness, M. B. Lawrence has been superintendent in active charge of operations, while E. E. Bland is in charge of the Joplin office of the company.

Here From Webb City.

For many years Mr. Shackleford made his home in Webb City, moving to No. 602 North Pearl avenue, Joplin, about two years ago. He had no children, his sole family survivors being his widow, Mrs. Luda Shackelford, who was with him at the time of his death, and a brother, Frank Shackleford, of Balboa, Cal. He was born in central Indiana, and was 59 years old.

Upon receipt of the news of his death here yesterday, a telegram of sympathy was sent to the widow for the American Zinc Institute by Richard Jenkins, secretary of the Tri-State branch.

F. B. Rogers, secretary of the Elks lodge, received a message from the secretary of a Chicago Elks lodge yesterday afternoon stating that the body of Mr. Shackleford had been forwarded from Chicago and will reach Joplin on the 3:25 o'clock Frisco train this afternoon. An escort from the local Elks lodge will meet the body at the depot. Members of the lodge have been asked to meet at the club house at 3 p. m. for that purpose.

Kassab's a Main Street fixture since 1907

Familiar Faces . . . and Places

By Mary Guccione

In 1903 a young Syrian by the name of Ralph Kassab left his home and family and boarded a ship for America, packing dreams of fortune and freedom.

"He was born in Damascus, Syria, and was educated there," says his son, Anthony Kassab. "He spoke three languages, Arabic, French and English. The Turks ruled over Syria so the national religion was Moslem and my family came from a Christian background."

At the time, Kassab, the youngest of nine children, was working for an importer/exporter.

"He kept seeing all this merchandise shipped to America so he figured that is where he needed to go, so he borrowed money from his employer and left."

Kassab, whose name means "winner" in Arabic, arrived on American ground in 1903, but didn't step foot in Joplin until 1907. It was in Joplin he realized he could have what dreams of America had always promised him: a business of his own, freedom to practice his Christian religion, and a land where he could be successful.

The first retail clothing store opened by Kassab in 1907 was called The Oriental Shop, located on Main Street, south of the present Pearl Brothers Hardware. Kassab stocked his store with imported silks, laces and brass. Between 1907 and 1939, Kassab moved his store several times, never leaving Main Street.

In 1939, he moved his clothing store to 418 Main where the present Basket Case is located. He changed the name of the store to Kassab's and ventured into a full line of ladies wear.

In 1921, he married Lillian Wardi, also a Syrian immigrant nearly 20 years his junior.

"In those old days the immigrants thought they had to have something to start with before they could ask a woman to marry him. She was almost 20 years younger and died almost 20 years later," says Anthony.

Ralph and his wife had three children, Leon, Anthony and Martha. As soon as the children were old enough, they began helping in the store. In their early teens, Leon and Anthony delivered merchandise by bicycle. They later worked in the back room, making their way to the cash registers by their later teens. Anthony and Martha designed props for window displays.

As Anthony shuffles through dozens of pictures, he points out windows he and his sister designed, pictures of what the downtown area looked like nearly a century ago and a worn photograph of his father.

"He was a very energetic man. He was gentle and his primary interests were his family, his church and his business."

"Back then," adds Anthony, "the streets were dirt, they had not been paved and at night a big truck would come down and water the street to settle the dust. The sidewalks were wooden."

In 1957, Ralph suffered a severe heart attack, allowing Anthony and Leon to take over full management in 1958.

Three years later, the brothers bought the S.S. Kresge Building and moved their store to their present location, 506 Main. This time they not only carried ladies wear, but opened a millinery also, carrying a full array of hats.

"Jackie Kennedy pretty much killed the hat. She used to wear those tiny pill boxes on her head and then she would appear without a hat at all," he recalls as he watches a customer try on one of their few hats. Kassab contends the hat is coming back.

Anthony says after 84 years in business, they are now catering to their eighth generation.

"We were serving our second generation when I was in high school."

In 1969, the Kassab brothers bought out the Leffen General Store, located next to them. They knocked a wall down and added a sports wear section to their store. They jumped from 2,500-square-feet to 8,500.

Through the years the Kassab family has seen the rise and fall and rise again of the downtown area they call home. They have seen new businesses come and old businesses change ownership. They feel fortunate to still be here.

"We have stayed here so long because I would say first of all family tradition, then our devotion to quality, value and personal service."

Anthony says he believes his father, who died in 1965, would be proud of the accomplishments his children have made.

"I think he would also be amazed in the change of America's buying habits. So many things in this culture have changed and this (their store) is one thing that hasn't."

Anthony and Leon have no plans of retiring soon, not only because they are too young to retire, but also because they have no successors to the store.

"There are no successors in line of the family. Nothing lasts forever. This is something in existence that is very unique and special that people don't see anymore."

In 1907, Ralph L. Kassab came to Joplin and opened the Oriental Shop at 613 Main St. The specialty shop sold womens' wear plus imported brass, silks, Persian rugs and linens. The downtown store would eventually take the family name and relocate to 506 Main St. For more than 90 years, Kassab's would provide the finest in womens' apparel. This interior photo was taken by Murwin Mosier in 1958 at the store then located at 418 Main St. Special "Sputnik" decorations were created by Martha Thomas to signify the beginning of the space age while reflecting America's preoccupation with Russian space travel.
